

Built off shore, firemen had to wade and swim out to dock

Fireboats move in for salvage work

NAVY DOCK FIRE

On the day following the FRONT ROYAL fire the Navy Degaussing Station in San Pedro became involved in one of the most spectacular fires in the harbor's history. Coast Guard fire fighters, still fagged from the previous day's battle, were called upon again to knock down this fire which menaced nearby oil terminals. Pictures on these pages tell more of the story.
