

"Hey, bud—why aren't you in civvies!"

When the "Log" was accepting pin-up pictures of our favorite girls, I thought I'd bring one in too. I brought in the negative but Photographer Hal Williams wouldn't print it up. Said something about being afraid of being alone with her in the dark room. I didn't think she was that bad looking! . . . We found out that J. V. Toter was a Scout Master of a Sea Scout troop in Hazleton, Pa. . . . All's hair in love and war: Chuck Aragon used to make daily trips to the Sick Bay mirror to examine (with a magnifying glass) the progress of 3 new curly hairs. Rumor had it that he had concocted a terrific mixture of hair tonic in his bathtub at home, with ideas of a big market on the Island.

Block's Busy Bucket Boys: After finding the fire hose inadequate for flooding the newly constructed ice rink, Cy "Sonya" Block, with the assistance of Lou Hurst and Fuzzy Levane, organized a "bucket brigade" and carried the water by hand. . . . They filled up 106 holes in the ice with 32 buckets of water! The following week Cy auditioned skaters for the mythical Island ice-travaganza, "The Ice Have It", or "Spars on Ice". (Attention Dunlop!) . . .

Head Man: I met a few characters during my stay here who make a hobby of asking people for their autographed photo "so I can hang it up in my bathroom". Well, Lou Hurst was one of these guys, but he really has a collection of his friends' pictures displayed in the head at home. (I got off easy—that's me right next to the medicine chest. You should see where Frank Klinker ended up!) . . .

Coke soak: Through a consensus of the boys in the know, Sam Siciliano was believed to be the champ Coca Cola consumer. But it was a little nasty of them to accuse

Sam of using slugs! . . . Bare Facts: Frank (fine head of skin) Kelly refrained from going into pool rooms a few years back. He liked to play the game but he got awfully tired of wiping the chalk off his head. (It was always being mistaken for the cue ball!) . . . When Bob Fleu's nose became infected and swelled up into a perfect "W. C. Fields" type, he was given extra duties besides those of Q.M. He had to guide the Ferry into the slip on foggy nights using his beak as a beacon! . . .

It was necessary to put a note in the "Log" to the effect that: "it would be appreciated if the red-head that works in the hospital would refrain from walking past the C. & R. Shop. Mamulski can't keep his mind on his work!" . . .

Just to be different we ran an article in the "Log" covering the wedding of Dick Winner and his bride, only instead of describing the bride's wardrobe we just mentioned that she was present and went into great detail about what Dick was wearing and what he took with him on his honeymoon! Turn about is fair play, Peggy! . . . Homer "Hamlet" Hull's friends were calling him "Vitamin Flintheart." It was my guess that it was vitamin "H" as in HAM! . . .

CINDERELLA BOYS: Harrington, Greason, Moe, Casey and Finn were feeling so good one night that they drank toasts in beer out of their SHOES! . . . They got me covered: Jimmy Morrison was the only guy in the Boat Pool who never touched any work with his bare hands. First time we ever heard of a guy who had callouses on his GLOVES. . . . "Snuffy" Fabri occasionally would run around the drill field in typical "duck fashion" because he wanted to get into shape. We like the shape he's had
