

THE LAST OF THE THIRD

James V. Sorce -- Well known for his taste in women, Jim learned all he knows at the Cape Christian Loran Station, a short distance from his home in Elgin, Illinois. This ET knows his way around bars, sailing and skiing. He was also a pretty fair Platoon Petty Officer. As Vice-President of the Hopley Yeaton Club, he managed to stop up a toilet with a "water" balloon and "arrange" the platoon party. Gee, those don't look like balloons, Jim!

Charles T. Supple -- Charley came to us (for better or worse) from Los Angeles, California, where he served time at Loyola University. His prior service included Cub Scouts and Brownies. While at RTC he was Founder-President of the Hopley Yeaton Club and a member of the Midnight Cycling Club. From his head to his shorts he was a tribute to his great idol, Hopley Yeaton.

Jerry N. Uyeda -- The giant of the 3rd Platoon lives in Portland, Ore. where he attended the University of Oregon. While at RTC he took an interest in bowling, tennis and pinball machines. Little Jerry is a great athlete and excelled as Platoon Guide where he tried his best to lead his men astray.

David B. Weiner -- He was always late for class formation, a habit he picked up while attending San Francisco State College in San Francisco. You might find him sleeping in Room 211 right now!

Stephan A. Williams -- Who would have guessed the day Steve arrived that under all that hair there was a body? Old Steve's boots came all the way from California State Polytechnic College in San Luis Obispo, California where he studied Industrial Engineering. You could often find him practicing radiotelephone procedures with his two-way radios. He has a great interest in Auto Mechanics and a sign on his "Bird" that reads "Speedy Stevie".

Leroy S. Young -- The Macon Maverick came to us from the scenic state of Georgia. After breaking out of Mrs. Hamilton's Kindergarten, Mercer University and Atlanta School of Art, Leroy came to RTC, where he became the only OC to ever get his nose caught in a parallel rule. A member of the Hopley Yeaton Club, he designed the Hopley T-shirt. He even saw a flying saucer on radar in CIC, but we all have bad days.
