

FIFTH PLATOON

David A. Bailey-- "Beetle" calls the Pontchartrain his home, having served 36 months aboard her as a 'real' quartermaster. But, investigation into the matter proved that he is really from Sacramento, California, and that he attended Sacramento State College, majoring in life science and English. Among his interests are sailing, basketball, playing bagpipes, and morning calisthenics. While at RTC he served as company adjutant and marched with the honor platoon.

Forrest S. Bauman -- "Steve" hails from well known Pennsburg, Penna. (about 250 miles east of Slippery Rock). His four favorite years were spent majoring in Physics (but he's a square guy anyway - really) at West Chester State. He likes photography and hunting, but physics is his life. Just mention electrons, explosives, or radio waves, and his eyes get glassy!

Ronald L. Blake -- A staunch New Englander and non-believer in the Berkeley Thanksgiving myth, Ron graduated from St. Lawrence University in New York with an economics major. Much of his time at Yorktown was spent matching his wit and cunning against the pin ball machine in the snack bar. You might even have caught him sneaking a listen to the Joey Reynolds radio show during study hour. When you asked him what he was doing, he'd slowly turn to you with the words: "Birds, baby, birds" or "Don't let it bother you, boobie".

Robert G. Bright -- "Not so", hails from Springfield, Missouri, where he attended Drury College, majoring in political science and economics. Among his interests are coin collecting, football, basketball, and volleyball, with special emphasis on writing letters to his fiancée. While at RTC 'Not so' alias 'Show me' held the office of company clerk, number one place in P. E. test, and specialized in being out of step with the rest of the Company Staff.

Ronald J. Cable -- A Southern Californian, Ronald got his degree (in "design", he says!) at U. C. L. A. with an AFROTC and drum major background, he's out to set leadership records--hammmmm.... He did command the "Fabulous Fifth" second term. Ron likes water sports and dreams of buying a yacht (on Ensign pay, Ronald??) and sailing away into the sunset. Bon Voyage, Buddy!
