

MORE FIFTH PLATOON

John S. Howse -- John almost matched Mike Menkin in worrying ability, but he outgrew the "Grades are up" sweat and left Menkin in a cloud of tranquilizers. Now he walks around with a glum smile of success on his face. Steve majored in Humanities and Philosophy at Oregon State University. Glendale California is his hometown. All of us developed conditioned reflexes at OCS, but Steve developed them in a different way. He was quiet all day but whenever taps was sounded, he started talking.

Duncan P. Johnson -- The only thing Johnson really has to his credit at OCS is about $400 worth of uniforms. We'll always remember him but we'd like to forget him because of his super-corny puns. Johnson's hobbies back at Holden, Mass., his hometown, are auto racing and weight lifting. How that goes together we'll never know. He graduated from Holden College with a BS in Economics. Just remember, Johnson, you can't handle a ship as you would an XKE.

Oliver H. Keep -- Oliver Hoagland Keep, better known as "Hoag" traveled all over the world before coming to OCS. Keep's two prime interests are mushroom hunting and drinking. He majored in Archeology at Princeton where he learned to decipher the hidden meanings of Sumarian artifacts. Keep was always forgetting that he was a military man. One Saturday, he said: "Come in" to the inspecting TDO.

Dennis E. Kramer -- Dennis Kramer, the Act One Hamlet of Barracks 96 whose pacing acted as the kind of internal heartbeat to RESTRAGEN, arrived here from Los Angeles where he graduated from UCLA in Chemistry. His favorite hobby is playing the piano and many a weary evening he could be heard singing "I Signed Something Wrong, Now I Long For Yesterday". He plans to spend his future acquiring shares of AT & T stock, a seeming subsidiary of his. The downstairs pay phone in barracks 96 is permanently shaped by his hand.

Richard B. Leonard -- Dick is the only left handed person in the 5th Platoon. Because he ate with his elbows sticking out, he was called "The Outrigger". Dick is the only man in the company from Albuquerque, New Mexico. He graduated from the University of New Mexico with a B. A. in Communications. That should give him a good crack at being assigned as navigator, gunnery or ASW officer.
