

MORE FIFTH PLATOON

Terence McCabe -- Terry looks more like a member of the Chicago underworld than the Treasury investigator he was before he entered OCS. He's called Spike by the guys who know him, or are afraid of him. He scored 356 on the pistol range. Spike is little known in his home in Patchogue, New York, but he has hopes of becoming a big spy for the CIA in the future.

W. Scott McGeorge -- A water sport fan from Pine Bluffs, Arkansas, Scott made it into our Honor Platoon, due to his excellent physical condition. Although he's quiet, he did happen to mention a few times that Arkansas has an outstanding education system. However, we're glad that RTC isn't in Arkansas. With a sturdy major like Business Administration from the University of Arkansas, he should make a fine gunnery officer.

Michael R. Menkin -- Big Menks never went on liberty or to the OC Lounge for the first 14 weeks he was here. Menkin was the biggest worrier in the 5th platoon. He also had the biggest feet in the company, size 14D. After attending six different colleges, Menks graduated from Cal State, Long Beach with a B. A. in Political Science. He'll always be remembered for saying, as OCOOD, "Remind your men of 9 o'clock room inspection."

Frank Mingarella, Jr. -- "Commander Pants" hails from Buffalo, N. Y. Frank got his nickname because his khaki pants are the same color pants that Lcdr. Smith wears. Frank learned about women while he was at Canisius College studying Philosophy. He has a clean approach to life. He changes his underwear at least three times a day.

Howard R. North -- Affectionately known as "Big H", Howard hails from Newport, R. I. He endeared himself to members of the 5th Platoon as their first commander, when, during the infamous "Stingo Fiasco" he was heard asking Lt. Parker, "Sir, do you really know Red Ryder?"

William M. Parke -- Doth the fifth platoon waiver in the performance of its appointed rounds? Not when the guidon is William M. "The Pointer" Parke. After all, he can be off his course, but not off his heading; or was it the other way around? A Psychology Major at Colgate University, he calls Scarsdale, N. Y. his home, and will attend flight school after graduation. Unfortunately, he will not be granted his fond wish of having Quartermaster Hayes write the copy for this yearbook.
