

JOHN MORGAN John had the basic goal of remaining anonymous as long as he could. However in the last weeks of the program the brass found him out and made him PPO. He survived, thinking a lot, never complaining, and cracking his Dutton's every morning at 0500.

KURT MUTO Happy Jack Cragin thought he had himself an SDSer when Kurt, replete with hair, arrived directly from California. Kurt's appointment with Joe the friendly barber was a hastily arranged affair precipitated by Mr. Cragin's "Muto, I can't stand that hair any longer—Make it to the barber shop!" Kurt later emerged as the platoon's pull-up, push-up, and guerilla exercise champion, while also excelling in academics and serving on company and battalion staffs.

JAMES REDMOND An industrious OC, Jim worked hard at finding time to get to the snack bar, the library for another skiing novel, or a place to rack out during study hour. Jim needed all the extra Z's he could get for his maneuvers as a SEAL. His intense interest in the program at RTC was culminated in his endless endeavors to get the lowest grades or log the most time anywhere but where he was supposed to be. A charismatic goof-off.

JAY REINING Jay's highest ambition was to be the only member of the platoon to remain undiscovered by "Happy Jack"—and through the first 13 weeks he succeeded. But inside the platoon, Jay was renowned for his long arms and a collision during the leadership game which resulted in four stitches on his red-whiskered chin. Jay is returning to his home, Houston, for his first duty assignment.
