

JOHN R. McDERMOTT, Providence, R.I. (U. of R.I.) Duty: WHEC: Boutwell. Poor Jack got here a few days late and missed some wonderful moments of "indoc" week. If he's not in his room you'll probably find him lifting weights or trying to avoid drowning in the pool. Jack claims he gets along famously with his roommate.

WILLIAM R. McGRATH, Northfield, Ohio. (Kent State) Duty: ECV Cleveland. Bill spent 17 weeks worrying about how to convince us that he wasn't worrying. He could typically be found scampering about mumbling "but I don't care" or babbling derogatory remarks about Cleveland. Bill had a fantastically acute nose for upcoming work details, and was renowned for his skillful disappearing acts.

DONALD H. MILLER, Elkhart, Ind. (Indiana U.) Duty: WHEC Cook Inlet. Don, the innocent recipient of Harry's homespun wizardry, opened the sleepy eye of many a somnolent TDO with his multi-reefed 6 fathom pants. It's hard to believe this big gentle mannered monster was a 90 lb. weakling before starting the "daily dozen".

GARY W. NYSTUL, Columbus, Montana. (Montana State) Duty: Concord Station. From the Big Sky Country, easy going Gary moseyed on down to Yorktown with a perpetual frog in his throat. Of Gar confided to us that he was hoping for a WHEC out of his home town.

JAAK E. RANNIK, Miami, Fla. (U. of Miami) Duty: Auxiliary New Orleans. Jaak, who did a fine job as Battalion Commander, excelled at the art of succeeding within the system without letting it get in his way. Never a man of prurient bent Jaak's incisive, ribald cracks left their caustic imprint on us all.

LEE S. RUMLEY, Washington, N.C. (AT-1) Duty: Flight Training. Stu, who provided B-4 with excellent leadership as our first and last platoon commander, was largely responsible for developing our winning habits. "Rhumb Line's" lack of military bearing and attitude provided our "squared away" platoon some anxious and harried moments.

KENNETH S. SHEPARD, JR., Lanesboro, Mass. (ET-1) Duty: WHEC Chase. Ken ceaselessly waxed eloquent about his love for RTC and its primary activity. Our official reveille counter, he was surely one of our champion letter writers.

ALAN T. TINGQUIST, Sparta, N.J. (U. of Minnesota) Duty: Base Galveston. Al was undoubtedly the most duh, duh, duh, squared duh, duh, away guy in the platoon. So what if he pranced in competition and forgot his name tag and stared at the wrong place. Al really was one of our best, not only in military bearing, but also as an athlete and leader.

LOUIS F. VAN DE WATER, Freeport, N.Y. (Penn State) Duty: WHEC Owasco. Dirty Lou was always ready with an instant replay of the day's happenings. His pastimes were not cleaning his deck and smoking cigarettes during room inspection while nattily attired in his Gen. McArthur shirt.

"Get with the program, Mister!"
