

A very large percentage of New Zealand's economy depends on sheep.

The soil is rocky but yields a wondrous bounty for those with patience.

A group of GLACIER sailors who set out exploring.

The interior of the country is mountainous and the soil cannot be worked easily. However, it is ideally suited for raising sheep which outnumber the human population 25-1.

