

. . . And leaving the crew's favorite port behind, headed out to sea. Destination: the friendly waters of a bay where the ship would complete her "shake down" and all hands could prepare for that final Naval inspection which would mark the beginning of active service.

