

Every member of the crew knows that past the submarine nets of American ports lies the "no-man's land" of the battle of the Atlantic. Anywhere in the Atlantic may come U-boats, mines and German bombers.

