

The Deck Department

To say that Deep Freeze '92 kept the deck force busy would be an understatement. From the time the Polar Sea left Seattle until well after on the way home, they were one of the hardest working departments aboard. There were drills between Seattle and Hawaii, cargo ops several times, and the boat lowering detail during helo ops, when they weren't doing something else.

Right: Shane, did you eat those nuclear beans again?
Below: Now where did they say that PA's body was?

Above: No, no . . . over the side, over the side!
Right: SA Russell Hodges.
Far Right: Mom told me there would be deployments like this.
