

ANTARTICA ANIMALS

Antarctica animal life is both ideally suited and developed for life in the cold. All of the animals down here depend on the sea for their food. The penguins, of which there are three types, are birds which cannot fly thru the air, but are real good at flying thru the water, as their swimming motions almost resemble flying thru the air. All of the animals except the whales come on the land or the ice to have their young. The Penguins, Skuas, and the other sea birds all nest on rocky islands or beaches, making nests of small rocks and lining it with feathers. The seals normally have their young on the ice. There are two main types of seals, they are the Weddell Seal and the Leopard Seal.
