

Our landing signal officer assisted each of the visiting aircraft.

While Sherman was on the gunline, helicopter operations became quite common. To the U.S. Navy Seawolves our large flight deck was a very welcome sight. They landed, refueled, sometimes had a hot meal, and used our ship's store, but were always back into the air after a very short while.

Down for a hot meal, a visiting pilot removes his helmet while surveying his inquisitive hosts.
