

Chief Fleming mentioned in an interview the constant rifle fire in the distance while working, which he became accustomed to after a few trips. Once the helo in which he rode had a call to fire. It dropped down to a pad and allowed Doctor Saddoris and Chief Fleming to get out before going into action. While waiting for the helo to return they noticed one hundred fifty or so uniformed Vietnamese coming out of the nearby woods, shooting as they ran in their direction. The doctor thought this would be an ideal time to take some pictures, until the idea occurred to him that they might not be friendly. Some of his pictures of more peaceful medcaps are here.

The actual administration was done by the Vietnamese.

But who did it didn't matter to some — a needle is a needle!
