

There were many peddlers on the street with their little stands and workshops making belt buckles, hats, jewelry and trinkets.

Kowloon, which is on the other side of the harbor, is a more modern place to visit with the big department stores and theaters.

Tourists from all over the world come to this little place to see what there is to see; the fabled ride on the cable car to the top of Victoria Peak, the small fishing village of Aberdeen, rides in sampans, and the beautiful beaches. To the sailor, it is a place where he can gather his thoughts, and get a change of scenery from the past days of duty.

*Alley business' are always interesting
They sell so many unusual items.*

The central business district has the more exclusive shops.

Playing cards ashore may not sound usual for such a city but it was our time.