

“ . . . There is a striking similarity between the Coast Guard Temporary Reserve, whose members stand ready to serve and to leave their civilian pursuits whenever the call to duty may come, and the Minute Men of New England who in our first great war left their homes, their fields and their workshops and sprang to duty as volunteer soldiers . . . ”

— ADMIRAL WAESCHE