

As the intensity of the sea increased soldiers became sea-sick, dishes crashed from their resting places, and ship's furnishings broke loose from their positions, but the stalwart WAKEFIELD pressed on with her precious cargo. The vessel had proven her seaworthiness and stability. Despite rough seas, enemy mines, sea raiders, and her zig-zag course, she reached Liverpool, England, in almost peactime record speed.

The WAKEFIELD docked at Princess Landing Stage, Liverpool. The boat marked, "Wreck", gives warning of a British ship sunken by enemy action
