

From one corner of a needy nation Vietnam's People bring their hurts and pains to our medical team. Entertaining, we gave laughter and smiles to dress their faces against the hardships of life within a war; and old clothes from home to dress the children, meager armor against the elements though not against the bullets. They respect the Americans and follow the bandful who help them defend the village that grows with refugees from the surrounding countryside. These are people whose lives are the rice they reap and the fish they can catch, and the war they fight.
